Will Be Given an Opportunity to Identify Her Brutal Police Oppressors.

The case of Mrs. Ceala Urchittel, the poor Russian woman, who told her pitiful story of persecution by the police to the Lexow Committee, last Wednesday, has roused general public sympathy, and there is a demand from all sides that dastardly oppressors should be ber dastardly oppressors should be brought to justice.

As "The Evening World" exclusively ascertained yesterday, the men who arrested her were ex-betectives Edward Shalvey and Ambrose Hussey, of the Delancey street station. Both these ward men have been reduced to the ranks and transferred to other precincts, and are now on vacation.

They are in town, however, and both deny that they had anything to do with the woman previous to the arrest, which was made on a warrant issued by Justice. "She says that he came to her house in police uniform, which would go to confirm this belief, for the ward men themselves seldom wore uniforms, but went about in citizens' clothes. However, it is hard to believe that neither of the ward men knew nothing about the case before they made the arrest. "In view of the publication made by 'The Evening World' of the names of these ward men, I wrote to both of them last night, saying that if any attempt was made to interfere with the witness, I should hold them personally responsible."

in sile can do so, in due time. Meanwhile another feature of the case is being worked up.
This is the cruellest part of her misfortune, the loss of her three children, whom, she claims, she was supporting,
and is still able to support by her own efforts. When she testified before the Lexow Committee she said that the policeman who first came to her and demanded money threatened if she did not pay it her children would be taken away from her, and she would be put in prison.
For this reason she made every effort to satisfy the demand, but after she had paid over all that she could raise she was arrested and locked up, and her children "put away" in the manner so well known to those who have ever had any dealings with the police courts and the agents of the Gerry

The fact has been repeatedly demonstrated that, when the Gerry Society once gets a child into its possession, no matter under what circumstances or by what misrepresentations, it will hang on to the unfortunate victim with the clutches of grim death, and refuse to give it up unless forced to do so by the pressure of public sentiment.

The law gives this institution the absolute custody and control of a child, once it has been committed to its charge by a police magistrate, until it shall reach the age of twenty-one, and although even Justices of the Surreme Court have often deplored this state of affairs, the law as it stands makes the lighest judicial authority of the State powerless to act, or even to restore to its parents a child which may have been committed by a mistake or under some misunderstanding.

Bupt Jenkins, who manages this sort of business for the Gerry Bociety, was called upon by an "Evening World" resported upon by an "Evening World" response this morning, and asked if he had read in the papere anything about the first looked at me she thought I was only nineteen, but when I talked I seemed like an old man.

"Well, I haven't anything to say anyhow."

"But supposing the story of this poor woman is true, wouldn't the Society be willing to restore her children to her, if it was found that she was able and willing to support them?"

"She tells a pack of lies," returned Jenkins brutally. "Every statement she makes is faise."

"Those who know her and the counse for the Lexow Committee say that they believe her."

"I don't care. Her children are where she can see them if she wants to. They are in good hands, and she is glad enough to have them there."

Jenkins turned his back at this point and refused to talk any more, although an attempt was made to put other questions to him.

"The statement that Mrs. Urchittel is glad, or even satisfied, to have her children tremain where they are," said Mr. Mon afterwards, when seen by the reporter, "is absurdly untrue. Her only thought is to get them back again. She is a widow, and all alone in the world, and without even her children to comforther she is, indeed, to be pitted.

"I think the people of New York would differ somewhat with Mr. Jenkins if they knew the facts."

The Rhode Island had left Providence about an hour, when Hughes and Pet tingill were heard quarrelling loudly. They continued to do so for some time and the attention of those occupying adjoining staterooms and the steam er's porters was drawn to them by the ncreased vehemence of the quarrel. Suddenly four pistol shots, fired in rapid succession, rang out from the stateroom in which Hughes and Pettingill were quarrelling.

The officers of the boat broke into the oom and found it filled with powder smoke, Pettingill was discovered standing near the wash basin with a new 38-calibre, nammerless Smith & Wesson pistol in his hand. He was promptly seized and disarmed.

An investigation showed that two chambers of Pettingill's pistol had been ecently discharged. The barrel was not and powder-blackened on the in side. There were three loaded cartridges still in the pistol.

No pistol was found on Hughes. The steamboat officers surmise that he had a weapon also, but that he threw it out of the stateroom window into the water when the door was broken in. Neither of the men was injured.
